PREFACE

Barbershop tag singing is surely one of the finest traditions arising from vocal harmony. A tag is a short passage consisting of an arrangement's ending, or coda, which is taught and sung in sessions of informal chord-ringing. The tag allows four singers to quickly blend their voices in a few seconds of blissful harmony without the burden of learning an entire song.

This manual is an anthology dedicated to the perpetuation of this practice. We have endeavored to chronicle the tag-singing of today and yesterday by collecting the "classic" tags—those which have become lore by virtue of having been repeated and passed along from harmonizer to harmonizer.

Most of these tags originated within the barbershop community, but a few from neighboring vocal styles have been embraced by barbershoppers and are therefore included as well. It should be noted that some of the tags contain chords which are not accepted in a barbershop contest. We have simply recorded the tags the way they are usually sung, with no editorial "corrections".

An effort was made to determine the origin of each tag, but this proved to be an impossible task. The source of many of these little gems seems lost in the murky past, perhaps never to be ascertained. When possible we have identified the tag's arranger and an approximate date of origin; if the tag was popularized by a particular performer, we have so indicated.

The tags appear in no particular order, and no consistent method was applied in labeling them. (Sometimes the tag is identified by its first line, sometimes by the song title, sometimes both, sometimes neither.) The index which appears at the end is hopefully thorough enough to enable the user to locate any particular tag. In some cases there exists more than one common version of a tag, in which case we have attempted to select the one which is most traditional, occasionally notating alternatives using grace notes. Accordingly, we have generally opted for the popular version even when it differs from the arranger's original.

Barbershop harmony is typically sung by singers of the same gender; hence a men's version and a women's version have been created. Often the most appropriate interval of transposition between the men's key and the women's key is a tritone, so a tag written in B-flat for men transposes to E for women. It is not unusual to find men and women singing tags together, and in this case they may choose to "split the difference" in selecting a suitable key by singing it approximately a minor third above where it is written for men, or a minor third below where it is written for women.

Many of these tags contain recognizable portions of copyrighted songs and arrangements. Therefore this manual may not be sold for profit. We are advised that, since a tag is not a "performable unit", the manual may be legally copied and used for educational purposes. Barbershop choruses will find the tags useful in warm-ups and as exercises in vowel matching, tuning, balance, and vocal production. However, anyone wishing to use this or any copyrighted material in public performance must obtain a legally cleared arrangement.

This manual is an ongoing project, to be updated and appended from time to time. The date of the latest revision appears at the top of page one. Many thanks are due to a number of people who assisted us in tracking down information. We would appreciate the help of anyone who can provide missing origins and/or dates of the tags in this collection, and we welcome suggestions for tags which should be included in future updates.

I wish to specifically recognize and thank my colleagues Jim Bagby, Kevin Keller, and David Krause for serving as an editorial board for this project.

Dix - - - ie, way down south.

This system contains the next two staves of the musical score. The top staff continues the melody from the previous system, ending with a half note. The bottom staff continues the accompaniment, also ending with a half note. The lyrics 'Dix - - - ie, way down south.' are written below the staves, with the word 'Dix' spanning across measures.
